"I found the clinic excellent, very interesting. A lot of information was given, as well as some new terminology and concepts. After watching I've taken away exercises to practice, giving me "new tools" to help with my horses' behaviour and I have seen positive improvements already. Lisa is very experienced and knowledgeable and I particularly liked the fact that she got on and demonstrated some of the techniques herself...will definitely be coming to watch the next one and hopefully bring my horse at a later date. Great value for money!" Sarah Derbyshire, Staffordshire

"I can't recommend Lisa enough for anyone who wants to learn how to become an ethical, effective horse trainer, her positive attitude and clear teaching manner make her an inspirational coach of Learning Theory."
Sally Mitchell, Yorkshire.

"You will discover a paradigm shift in your understanding of horse training like never before." Dr Andrew McLean, AEBC
Director, Australia

Lisa is the highest qualified Equitation Science horse trainer in the UK, holding the Equitation Science International Certificate awarded by Dr Andrew McLean

Lisa has an engaging and passionate teaching style, paying close attention to delivering safe, effective and ethical training. Lisa applies the First Training Principles (ISES, 2010) www.equitation-science.com, which are embedded in the Australian Equine Behaviour Centre's training system, so you can understand from your horses perspective what works, what does not and why. Lisa teaches horses and riders of all levels, ages, and stages of ability, with Your Horse (April 2012 issue) demonstrating Lisa's work and equitation science as "brain training for horses".

EquiSci clinics, workshops, lectures and demos are given throughout the UK and Europe. If you are looking to improve your horses way of going safely, effectively, and ethically, all the evidence points to equitation science and Lisa Ashton, accredited by Dr Andrew McLean.
